

BONNET HOUSE

MUSEUM & GARDENS

OCTOBER 2022 - JANUARY 2023

FROM THE CEO

Patrick Shavloske

THE FALL EDITION of our House Happenings newsletter is the edition where Bonnet House publishes information about its finances and recognizes its top donors who have been so integral to the preservation of the historic home. Before commenting on some key aspects of the museum's fiscal performance and programmatic success, I want to thank all our hundreds of donors and especially those listed in this publication. Your generosity helps perpetuate Evelyn Bartlett's wishes for Bonnet House, and each year, I am humbled and grateful when I see the level of your support.

This year, more than any in the past, I am reminded that it is individual donors who form the bedrock of Bonnet House's benefactors. Many hold a view that grants from corporations and foundations are the key to fundraising success, but that is in fact a misperception. It's individuals who carry the day in charitable contributions, supporting causes near and dear, people like you!

You can see that Bonnet House had an overwhelming level of unrestricted giving in 2021-2022, totaling over $1 million. Much of this was from planned gifts to Bonnet House, but though a gift may have come by way of a will or trust, it was still an individual donor who directed his or her generosity to Bonnet House using an estate planning tool.

Earned revenue was very healthy last year too. Tour revenue saw record levels totaling over $600,000 with estate rentals (think weddings and other private events) coming in at a remarkable $500,000. Yes, pent-up demand from COVID was a contributing factor, but no one should minimize that it's the special sense of place and unique history of Bonnet House that merits such levels of interest.

On the expense side, after earnings for eleven full time and twenty-seven part time employees, over $260,000 went to repairs and maintenance to Bonnet House and collection item conservation. When outside services and utilities are taken into account, almost $350,000 was expended on preserving and maintaining Bonnet House. Net operating revenue for the year was just over $723,000 for the year.

So why the loss of just over $817,000 for the year? Investment performance. The last six months of our fiscal year coincided with the recent slide in the stock market. The value of Bonnet House's investments declined precipitously in the January to June period mirroring many investment portfolios. However, these assets are carefully and professionally managed for the long term and in time will regain value.

But financial prudence alone does not measure the success of Bonnet House; programmatic results are equally as important. The past fiscal year saw 38,739 participants in Bonnet House Tours. In addition, 4,250 area youth participated in one of the museum's education programs, and 915 adults participated in an adult education offering. The museum was utilized 79 times for a wedding or other private gathering, and the Bonnet House website received 25,000 visits each month last year. In terms of collection successes, fourteen paintings by Frederic Bartlett that had never had conservation treatment were stabilized and exhibited, and five new paintings by the Bartletts were added to our collection. The great south window of the studio was thoroughly repaired and the second floor veranda floor was repaired and painted contributing to the ongoing preservation of Bonnet House.

Taken in total, 2021-2022 can be deemed an overwhelming success for Bonnet House. To everyone who played a role, you have my sincerest thanks. I am confident that 2022-2023 will see many more good things to come for the museum.

GILDED BUDDHIST TEMPLE FLOWERS

Denyse Cunningham, Curator

THE GOLD FLOWERS in the eastern corners of the Music Room are gold lacquered wood Buddhist Temple lotus blossoms, buds and seed pods. The flowers depict a different state of maturity. In Buddhism, the eight-petalled lotus is the symbol of enlightenment and purity, and it can be found in ponds near temples and shrines in Japan during the summer.

According to former Bonnet House guide and professional journalist Krystina Halliburton, "powerful symbolism stems from the fact that the lotus is born in the depths of muddy waters and emerges, unsullied, as a beautiful bloom. It speaks of the eternal cycle of life, and of the union of the four elements: water, earth, air and fire. To some, the lotus flower represents long life, health, honor and good luck. It also signifies that a dark or trying stage has been overcome."

One of the six Buddhist flowers is the frangipani (Plumeria rubra) which has a beautiful pink bloom and grows in the hibiscus garden at Bonnet House. The highly fragrant flowers are used to craft traditional Hawaiian leis.

There are twenty-two gilt lotus flowers, and they probably date from the late 19th century. The vases that hold the flowers are French porcelain and also from the late 19th century.

Hollyhock House, designed by Frank Lloyd Wright as a residence for oil heiress Aline Barnsdall, has a similar arrangement that they purchased from an Asian art gallery in Los Angeles. The dealer who sold them to the museum said they were from the Edo Period.

In 1996, in one of the worst days in my career, I opened the door to the Music Room and to my horror the gold flowers were strewn on the floor in front of the settee on the southeast side of the room and the vase holding the flowers was broken in several pieces. A raccoon had come down the chimney and gone wild before exiting the same way he came in! At some point he must have become panicky and tried to escape through the windows - the Venetian blinds were muddy with paw prints and in disarray.

The animal had to push aside a great deal of insulation that was blocking the flue and force open the wrought iron grate. Once inside the naughty creature climbed onto the mantle. Luckily the veiled lady was saved from damage. One of the covered jars on the mantle was pushed off and lay broken on the ground. The raccoon had gotten onto the piano, leaving a perfect muddy "hand" print on the polished wood to secure his identity. He pushed off one of the shell arrangements, but it was not damaged.

Needless to say, shortly after the invasion we capped all of the chimneys in the house and the Caretaker's Cottage. Mrs. Bartlett had liked to have fires in the fireplaces. There are four in the Main House so we previously could not block off the chimneys, but, by 1996 she had stopped spending her winters at Bonnet House.

The two broken items were repaired by the Fine Arts Conservancy in Palm Beach Gardens. Luckily no other artifacts were damaged. If you look closely at the glass jar on the south side of the mantel you can see the repairs. There is just so much you can do to conserve an item that had been smashed so badly.

Apparently, there is a very specific order for the arrangement of these particular flowers. If ours were arranged in the traditional Japanese manner the raccoon put an end to that!

FALL & WINTER ADULT EDUCATION PROGRAMS

Linda Schaller, Director of Education & Volunteer Programs

NEW CLASSES AT BONNET HOUSE 2022-2023

Bonnet House the home of artists Frederic Clay Bartlett, Helen Birch Bartlett and Evelyn Fortune Bartlett is hosting some fantastic art classes this coming season. The Bartletts would be proud to know that artists of all types will be enjoying these beautiful grounds while learning new techniques.

As we get ready to fall back on November 6th we are also getting ready for a great new season of classes here at Bonnet House. Not only do we have some great classes but we have GREAT teachers too. Please check the two new water-color classes in October taught by Barbara DiMartini. One is just for beginning students and the other is for intermediate. Barbara will continue the classes starting on January 11 on Wednesdays from 9:30-12:30. Charlee Kresback will be teaching the Art of Basket Weaving on Saturday, November 12; students will make a wine basket just in time for the holidays.

Bonnie Opie, our acrylic teacher, will be teaching her acrylic classes starting on Jan. 12 but will also be teaching a new oil/acrylic painting class on Tuesdays starting January 10. Tony Pastucci has both beginning and intermediate calligraphy classes starting on Tuesday, January 10th in the Island Theater. Master Birder Paddy Cunningham will start her classes in October and Don Oprea, certified shinrin-yoku forest bathing teacher will help you learn to relax with nature. Colored pencil classes will also be offered soon. Galal Ramadan teaches new techniques that will help you create great looking artwork without years of experience. His next series of classes will start on Saturday, October 8.

We limit the number of students for each class to allow for maximum teacher-student interaction.

BONNET HOUSE NEEDS GREAT VOLUNTEERS

Each year Bonnet House hosts many group guided tours along with student education programs. We need many trained volunteers to implement these programs. Our student programs are given to students mainly k-6th grades and entail a special tour of the house along with investigation of the grounds, learning about the people who lived on these grounds long before the Bartlett & Birch Family were born. Students learn about the Tequesta people, the Barefoot Mailman and the early settlers along with the staff who lived and worked here with the Bartlett & Birch Family. This is a fun program, but we need the staffing to teach these inquisitive minds. The same goes for the group tours. Each guide and volunteer teacher shares a very special story with each of our visitors.

The room docents learn all the particulars about individual rooms and share some interesting stories with our visitors. The nature trail interpreters talk about the history of this interesting 35 acres of beachfront property along with some facts about our ecosystems and what lives where.

The Events Department needs hostesses and hosts to welcome guests for events and weddings along with safe tram drivers to deliver guests to the right locations. Take a look around at what our grounds and orchid volunteers have done to make everything truly beautiful. They work so hard in every type of weather to spruce up the grounds; the weeds never stop growing, and the plants and trees need trimming all year long.

If you want to volunteer we have a place for you. Please check out our website or set up a visit with Linda (lindaschaller@bonnethouse.org) if you want to help keep Bonnet House beautiful for all of our guests.
